DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1-5, 10-14, 16 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Grewe et al. (U.S. Patent No. 5,625,673) in view of Jones, Jr. (U.S. Patent No. 5,625,673).

Regarding claims 1-2, 4, 10-14, Grewe et al. disclose a portable computing, communication and entertainment device comprising: a detachable handset unit sized for handheld grasping (e.g. cellular telephone, col. 1, line 62) and including a processor and a plurality of first circuits (cell phone inherently includes processor and circuits), processor controlling the operation of first circuits; a portable docking display unit including a first display and a plurality of second circuits (e.g. PDA 10, col. 2, line 30); and, processor controlling the operation of at least one-of-second circuits and first display when detachable handset unit is docked with docking display unit (e.g. the PDA is combined with the cell phone to form a single integrated apparatus, col. 1, lines 61-64). Grewe et al. do not clearly teach that the portable docking display unit is dimensioned to receive docking of detachable handset unit. Jones, Jr. teaches a multi-positional PDA handset configuration wherein the handset can be secured during travel [Figs. 1-3; col. 4, lines 2-10]. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to provide the display unit of Grewe et al. with a handset configuration as taught by Jones, Jr. for the purpose of securing the handset to the docking display unit during travel.

Regarding claim 3, the combination also teaches a device, as in claim 2, wherein portable docking display unit further includes a second electrical connector (e.g. connector 14, Grewe et al. Col. 2, line 34) for removably engaging first electrical connector (e.g. connector 24, Grewe et al. Col. 2, line 37) when detachable handset unit and portable docking display unit are docked [Grewe et al. - col. 2, lines 49-51].

Regarding claim 5, the combination also teaches a device, as in claim 4, wherein docking display unit further includes a wired communication circuit and a communication jack [Grewe et al. Fig. 9].

Regarding claim 16, the combination does not teach that the handset includes a GPS receiver. The examiner takes Official Notice that GPS is very well known in the art for monitoring the position of an object. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include in the handset of the combination a GPS receiver as is well known in the art to help locate the handset easily.

3. Claims 6-9, 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Grewe et al. (U.S. Patent No. 5,625,673) in view of Jones, Jr. (U.S. Patent No. 5,625,673) and still further view of Pardo (U.S. Patent No. 6,266,539).

Regarding claims 6-9, the combination of Grewe et al. and Jones, Jr. do not include in the docking display a speaker and a microphone. Pardo discloses a PDA that has a speaker and a microphone [col. 9, lines 28-36]. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to include in the PDA of Grewe et al. in view of Jones, Jr. a speaker and a microphone as disclosed in Pardo so that users can have their choice of using either the handset or the PDA for voice communication.

Regarding claim 15, the combination also teaches that data exchange is enabled through infrared interface [Pardo - col. 11, lines 23-25].

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

- Borland (U.S. Patent No. 6,343,217) teaches digital cordless telephony with pcm coding.
